When you're planning a corporate Christmas party or a holiday event, you know that you want to give your clients a different Christmas party so they encouraged them to have a casino-themed party, and they were willing to roll the dice with her. She went to work on making sure that the bathroom inside the Hilton Stamford Hotel looked like a private casino experience, being a color palette of red, black and gold. She made sure that guests knew from the moment they walked in that they were in for a "party". The entrance donated a balloon display that included playing cards and a sign that read "Physical Ballroom". Once inside, guests were invited to either be seated at a fully decorated table or to sit at the neighborhood high-top tables. Even the bar became a part of the decor. Playing cards and dice accentuated the floral and candlelight decor.

Of course, no casino is complete without casino games and guests were able to try their luck at traditional games such as Blackjack, Roulette and Poker. The entertainment was provided by DJ Jersey and the menu was impressive in its own right. Guests had a selection of either their migron, salmon or grilled chicken, and they were able to enjoy their sweet treats with delicious items such as black and gold. They were also able to enjoy their sweet treats with delicious items such as pop-tarts, cookies, macarons, mallow pops and chocolate covered fruit. Who says a corporate Christmas party in Connecticut has to be bland and boring? Definitely not Nadia of N'Chantment Events. When hired to plan and design this corporate event, she knew that she wanted to give her client a different Christmas party so she encouraged them to have a place with her. She went to work on making sure that the ballroom inside the Hilton Stamford Hotel looked like the ultimate casino experience. Using a color palette of red, black and gold, she made sure that guests knew from the moment they walked in, that they were in for a "party."

The entrance dominated a balloon display that mimicked playing cards expertly crafted by Poparazzi Balloons. Once inside, guests were invited to either be seated low at luxuriously decorated tables or high at the sophisticated high boy tables. Even the bar became a part of the Decor: Playing cards and dice accented the formal and candlelight decor.

Of course, no casino is complete without casino games and guests were able to try their luck at traditional games such as Blackjack, Roulette and Poker. The entertainment was provided by DJ Jimmy and the money was impressive in its own right. Guests had a selection of either bistro, mignon, salmon or grilled chicken, and they were able to satisfy their sweet tooth with delectable sweets such as parfaits, cookies, marshmallow pops and chocolate covered Rice Krispy treats. There were several high rollers and at the end of the night, the company awarded the highest three with prizes. Everyone in attendance will remember the night they attended their company's Christmas party and left a winner in spirit anyway! Story by April S. Davenport
